

Advice to Your Younger Self Script

Alright, so the question is what advice would you give your younger self?

Always know a good joke.

Hang on to your childish fantasies and keep learning and practicing playing the rest of your life.

Search for hair product no, it is never too late.

Just get older and a little wiser. As hard as you can go, forever.

Know you're apart of common humanity, that everyone's feeling this way one way or another and catch yourself being good.

I would tell myself to just be my own person rather than changing myself to make other people like because your real friends are going to like you for who you are.

You aren't going to medical school, you are going to do something totally different, so don't even worry about it.

Do what feels right to you not what you think other people think you should do.

Don't compare yourself to other people. Because there will always be someone smarter than you more talented than you prettier than you skinnier than you has better hair has better skin. Everyone's going to be better at something so why compare yourself? Compare yourself to how you used to be or how you want to be, don't compare yourself to like everyone else that will get you nowhere.
